1968 FILM SEARCH
(A Word About The Media)

Just as a literacy program or the effort to bring pure water to a community is not an end in itself, but an opportunity which serves a greater purpose, so films are not programs in themselves but only an opportunity to serve a greater purpose.

To provide NYAPSAE with a wide variety of titles, a nation-wide questionnaire was sent to Libraries, Universities, State Education Departments, College and University Professors, State and National Associations and Commerical film companies. The questionnaire simply asked:

> What adult education films were developed or found useful during the past few years?
>
> 1. For administrative, public relations, and interpretation of adult education.
>
> 2. For the inservice training of teachers and adults.
>
> 3. As curriculum aids for adult education teaching.

In the "1968 FILM SEARCH" we were concerned with films which were designed to inform, to motivate and to instruct. We wanted films which were factual, documentary,or representative in nature. The motivation materials would be designed to encourage, inspire or recommend a particular course of action. The instructional films would be concerned specifically with the acquisition of techniques and knowledge for a definite purpose.

This is not meant to be a comprehensive listing of all films used in continuing education. Included are those which seemed most suitable in the light of the foregoing catagories.
